The students, faculty, and staff of the Seattle University School of Law recognize that all members of the University community benefit from exposure to the different points of view that a diverse student body brings to the legal process. The Law School also recognizes its larger responsibility to ensure that the bar and bench, as well as society in general, are beneficiaries of a legal profession whose members reflect this nation’s cultural, ethnic, religious, and socio-economic diversity. In fulfillment of this responsibility, the Law School is committed to the recruitment and to the retention of students from historically underrepresented and/or disadvantaged groups. The Seattle University School of Law Mission Statement reads in part: “Our students are, and will remain, distinctive and diverse. We admit students whose life experiences and talents demonstrate the ability, intellect, and character to complete our program successfully, whether they are entering directly after college, changing careers, or combining legal education with their ongoing professions. We actively seek diversity in our community, welcoming qualified persons of different races, ethnicities, religions, ages, disabilities, genders, sexual orientations, socioeconomic backgrounds, and points of view.” This report provides information on our successes in recruiting, enrolling and graduating minority students and attracting diverse faculty and staff to the Seattle University School of Law community.

MINORITY GRADUATES PRACTICING LAW IN KING COUNTY

Since the first graduation occurred in 1974, Seattle University School of Law has had a major impact on diversifying the Bar. Between 2005 and 2009, 404 persons of color received a law degree from Seattle University School of Law. Of that number, 242 graduates currently work in King County and the surrounding counties. (These numbers were determined by reviewing our alumni records, as well as the records of the Washington State Bar Association.) From the above statistics, we see that approximately 60% of our minority graduates pursue careers in King County. In addition, and taking into account the current student enrollment, the following pattern emerges:

In our 2010 graduating classes, there were 82 minority graduates. There are 260 students of color currently enrolled in the law school (down slightly from 273 last year). Although this number is slightly down, we are confident that we continue to enroll the highest number of students of color of any law school in this region. Based on history, we project that 210 additional Seattle University School of Law graduates will decide to practice in this geographic area over the next several years.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR STUDENTS OF COLOR

Scholarships for students of color have been a top funding priority at the law school for many years. Dollars devoted to such scholarships continue to make up a significant portion of our scholarship dollars.

To augment financial assistance dollars generated by tuition revenues, the law school continues efforts to secure minority scholarship gifts from outside sources. In addition to the generous grants provided in recent years by the King County Bar Foundation, alumni, selected law firms, and a generous anonymous donor (who has created an endowment to provide scholarships for students enrolled in our nationally recognized Access Admission Program) have supported minority scholarships. The ARC endowment alone is now worth in excess of $8 million. This year the Law School was able to award $416,000 to support our ARC scholars. Disadvantaged students of color are the prime beneficiaries of these scholarships. During this academic year, we awarded ARC Scholarships to 52 students. Of the 52 recipients, 42 (80%) were students of color. Additionally the Law School has established a Minority Scholarship Quasi-Endowment which is currently valued at a little over $500,000.

For the second year, we awarded a three-year, full-tuition scholarship to an admitted student who is an enrolled member of a federally recognized tribe. The successful recipient must demonstrate a commitment to Native issues, academic achievement and promise. Native Americans have one of the smallest bars in the nation, and Seattle University School of Law is committed to increasing the number of Native students who attend law school. We expect to offer this award on an annual basis.

As part of a continuing commitment to our mission of educating leaders for a just and humane world, each year we offer two Scholars for Justice Scholarships. The three-year, full-tuition scholarships are provided to encourage the Scholars to concentrate on public interest commitments while in law school and to engage in a career in public interest law upon graduation. Scholars are asked to make a moral commitment to devote much of their careers to public interest law or to donate to the School of Law an amount at least equal to award funds received. Of the 12 recipients of this scholarship, four are persons of color.

Although we provide a substantial amount of financial support to our students of color, the cost of a legal education (particularly at a private school) is a significant barrier to many of our students. The average scholarship award is $9,000 (the range is from $4,000 to full tuition). The cost of attendance (which includes tuition, books, room and board) for a full-time first year student for the 2011-12 academic year is expected to be $57,200 a year. Since many of our students of color are interested in working with under-served communities rather than working in more lucrative positions, the potential debt load is even more daunting.

SCHOLARSHIP CRITERIA

All applicants of color (as well as candidates with physical disabilities or other documented disadvantages) automatically are given “special factor” consideration in the scholarship awarding process because of their ability to contribute in special and significant ways to the diversity and strength of the student body. Factors considered in determining those who shall receive scholarships, as well as the amount of each award, include:
1. Academic performance in relationship to personal history
2. Personal accomplishments (career history, community service, “life experience”, and related qualitative factors)
3. Financial need
4. Potential to “make an important difference” in the life of the law school and/or the legal profession

It is important to note that academic performance in law school (or at-entry statistical indicators such as the LSAT) is evaluated in light of the many obstacles persons of color must overcome. For example, renewal of scholarships for disadvantaged students (including, of course, disadvantaged students of color) is automatic if they rank in the top half of the class. Other scholarship recipients must rank in the top quarter for automatic award renewal.

- ADDITIONAL FUNDING

  - As noted above, the Law School is expending over $1.3 million this year on scholarships for students of color.

  - In addition, to signify the Law School’s enduring commitment to such scholarships, we established a Minority Scholars Endowment Fund in 1999 to which alumni and friends are encouraged to contribute. Current market value of that fund is $543,630 from which we were able to award $25,445 for minority scholarships in 2010-2011.

  - As a result of the multiple gifts to the endowment to benefit alternative admission student scholars, we were able to provide an additional $416,000 annually in scholarships to students. A majority of the recipients are students of color.

  - With the help of our Seattle University colleagues, additional funds are raised each year via campus-wide events like the Seattle University Gala and the COSTCO Scholarship Breakfast which generates several hundred thousand dollars for student aid at the University of Washington and Seattle University. Although these funds are earmarked for undergraduate students, we have the opportunity to recruit these students to Seattle University School of Law.

- STUDENT RECRUITMENT

Recruitment of applicants from historically underrepresented groups has been a fundamental commitment of the law school since its founding in 1972. That commitment has grown in breadth and strength during the seventeen years we have been affiliated with Seattle University, an institution that embraces diversity as a fundamental part of its mission. While many of our recruitment efforts are designed to increase our applicant pool, we also engage in activities that are designed to increase interest in the legal profession (pipeline programs). Our efforts focus not just on the immediate future. We endeavor to assist in promoting diversity in the legal profession by encouraging minority high school and undergraduate students to pursue a legal education.

- PIPELINE PROGRAMS

  1. In cooperation with the King County Bar and the University of Washington, we participate in the Future of Law Institute (FLI). We bring over 80 high school minority and other disadvantaged students to the Law School. This year Seattle University School of Law assisted KCBA in securing a $10,000 grant to support the program. This summer we will once again present, along with the Alaska Association of Women Judges, “The Color of Justice Program”, targeted to native Alaskans. The program was also expanded this past February with an event in Sitka, Alaska. Since 2005 Seattle University has assisted with the grant helping to secure $10,000 for the program annually.

  2. We participate in the WSBA YLD Pre-Law Conference in Yakima and the Youth and Justice Forum in Pasco. Our Assistant Director for Student Life continues to serve on the Planning Committees for both programs. We assist in organizing panels of current law students of color to make presentations to high school students interested in a career in law, including the Youth and the Law Forum in Seattle.
3. During “Discover Law Month” the Admissions Office hosted 80 young Latinas. SU Latina law students volunteered to mentor students in the “Building Dreams: Latina Student Mentoring Project” in the Bellevue School District.

4. Since 2010, Seattle University School of Law has hosted and helped coordinate the Just The Beginning Foundation’s Summer Legal Institute (SLI). SLI is a 5-day program designed to introduce high school students of color to the legal system, expose them to careers in law, and provide them with practical tools for achieving their educational goals. Students work with judges, lawyers, and law students on legal reasoning, case analysis, writing, negotiation, and oral argument exercises. In addition, students and their parents/guardians/mentors receive college preparatory advice.

5. We are involved in an on-going working relationship with Graduate Horizons, a program aimed at assisting Native American students in the admissions process to graduate school.

6. We have developed partnerships with Evergreen State College, University of Washington-Tacoma, Western Washington University, Central Washington University-Des Moines and Seattle Central Community College to facilitate a continuing relationship with students of color and economically disadvantaged students who are interested in law school.

7. In February, representatives from the Law School participated on a panel at the Conference on Pathways for Native American Students. The conference was organized and hosted by the Evergreen State College under grants from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the Lumina Foundation for Education. Over 200 participants from colleges and universities around the nation attended the conference.

8. We partnered with Heritage University to present a program to educate and develop local students as community leaders in the Yakima Valley. Approximately two-thirds of the students involved in the initiative are from low income Latino/Latina families; one-third are from low income Native American families.

9. The School of Law’s Center for Indian Law and Policy and the Office of Admission have entered into a strategic partnership to develop relationships and a pipeline with the tribes using the services of the Center.

10. In April, we hosted a group of Tukwila freshmen in the AVID program. In addition to learning about leadership and the law, they also learned about study skills from Professor Lustbader, Director of our Academic Resource Center.

- GENERATING APPLICATIONS

Listed below are some of the efforts made by our Admissions Office to increase the number of students of color in our applicant pool:

1. Direct mailings to targeted minority audiences and honors programs geared to students of color.
2. Ongoing contact with local community groups servicing large numbers of persons of color.
3. Regular communication with pre-law and minority affairs advisors at selected colleges across the country.
4. Solicitation of minority alumni and students to refer prospective students of color.
5. Heavy use of minority alumni and students as "off-site" recruiters.
6. On-site recruiting by professional staff at colleges, universities, and recruiting forums where large numbers of minority prospects will be present (including recruitment visits to historically Black colleges and universities).
7. Participation in the following conferences in order to reach more students of color: South Carolina Bar Minority Pre-Law conference, the Mid-Atlantic Pre-Law Conference.
8. Co-hosted the West Coast Consortium minority/students of color law fair.
9. Inclusion of prospective students of color in activities sponsored by the school’s minority student organizations the spring before summer or fall admission.

- CONVERTING APPLICANTS TO MATRICULANTS

Once admitted, candidates of color are cultivated via a range of activities, including:

1. Calls and personal notes from currently enrolled minority students.
2. Letters of congratulations and offers of assistance from the Student Bar Association Diversity Representative.
3. A roster of names and business telephone numbers of minority law graduates, with a note encouraging admittees to contact these practitioners.
4. Orchestrating opportunities for dialogue between students of color and faculty members teaching in each student's areas of interest (as well as connecting faculty with students of color).
5. Highly individualized cultivation and follow-up by the Dean, the Associate Dean for Student Affairs, the Assistant Dean for Admissions, faculty and staff of color, and others as appropriate.
6. Financial support to select out of state students of color to help defray costs of visiting the School of Law prior to enrollment.
7. Student of Color Phonathon to all admitted students of color.
8. Invitation to a special dinner for all admitted students of color hosted by Office of Admissions and minority student organizations.
9. Coordinate outreach efforts to admitted students from the local minority bar associations.

STUDENT RETENTION

Since the early 1970s, the Law School has offered targeted programs to increase access to legal education for historically underrepresented groups. These efforts have been improved and refined over the years to culminate in what is today known as our Access Admission and Continuing Support Program, a program cited by the ABA as one of the finest of its type in the country. The Washington State Bar Association awarded the 2006 Excellence in Diversity award to the School of Law in recognition of the contribution that this Program has made to diversifying the legal profession’s employment of ethnic minorities, women, and persons with disabilities.

The program offered at Seattle University might be viewed as our own expanded, intensified, and sustained in-house version of CLEO. But in contrast to CLEO:

1. We deliver our intensive summer program to students here at their home law school.
2. The students admitted through the Access Admission Program continue their studies with the support of their peer group from the summer, as well as with continued academic support offered via the Academic Resource Center for students’ entire tenure as law students.
3. We support the program (at a cost in excess of $350,000 per year) entirely on our own, with no federal, state, or other public financial assistance.

The Law School’s Access Admission and Continuing Support Program has received national attention for its success in enhancing the retention of students of color. Academic Resource Center Director Paula Lustbader, a 1988 graduate, is recognized as an innovator and expert in effective teaching techniques and academic support for the culturally diverse law classroom. Professor Lustbader has done extensive research and writing on learning theory, teaching methods, and diversity. She has presented at national and international teaching conferences. She has chaired both the AALS Section on Academic Assistance and the AALS Section on Teaching Methods. Professor Lustbader is joined by Brendon Taga (Class of 2008), Assistant Director of the Academic Resource Center and an Asian American.

In order to retain students of color, we make every effort to make sure these students find a welcoming community. The Student Bar Association Diversity representative, the Office of Student Affairs and the Office of Admission host a summer barbecue for all students of color. The Diversity Representative also organizes our annual “Diversity Week” and the Diversity Table talks in the Fall and the Spring. Professor Hank McGee and Ms. Chach Duarte White, a Latina and former Associate Director of ARC, now the Diversity Program Manager for the WSBA, host events in their homes welcoming African American and Latino/a students. The Law School administration hosts an Access Summit to provide students of color an opportunity to become involved in admission and retention of students of color.

The School of Law provides significant support to our minority student organizations, including providing financial support so that our students may attend national conferences and local Minority bar dinners. In 2008, the Law School hired Fe Lopez, a 2006 graduate of the School of Law and a Latina as our Assistant Director for Student Life. One of Ms. Lopez’s responsibilities is to develop diversity initiatives with student organizations and coordinate these efforts with other administrative offices. Ms. Lopez is a member of all the minority bar associations and is the President of the Latino/a Bar Association. She relays updates and announcements from the bar associations to students through our Minority List Serve (MLS). This list serve is open to all students who wish to learn of opportunities for our diverse student population, such as networking events, scholarships, internships, externships, and other opportunities.

Under the leadership of Ms. Lopez, Student Life partnered with the Access to Justice Institute to create the “Lawyering in a Diverse World” year-long training series for our law students. These are a series of engaging workshops designed to create awareness and empower law students and attorneys with skills and tools on a variety of issues related to diversity, and ultimately give our students the competitive edge for effective lawyering in our increasingly diverse and complex world. The following site includes a list of the current and past trainings offered: http://www.law.seattleu.edu/Student_Life/Diversity.xml. Ms. Lopez also provided critical support to the student organizations who organize Social Justice Week in the fall and Diversity Week in the spring. To access an archive of past Social Justice Week events, please go to the following site: http://www.law.seattleu.edu/Student_Life/Reaching_for_JUSTICE_Week.xml.

The Office of Alumni Relations along with the Black Law Student Association (BLSA) continue to host our annual evening celebration honoring members of the alumni community who so generously contribute to students, BLSA and the School of Law. At the reception the Law School awarded both the BLSA Alumni Award and the BLSA Leadership Award. This year, the Latina/o Law Student Association and the Office of Alumni Relations hosted our second annual Latina/o Alumni Awards Reception. At this reception we celebrated our Latina/o alumni who exemplify the Law School's mission and are giving back to our community. Two alumni were presented with our annual awards - the La Justicia Award and the Spirit of Service Award. While we are justifiably proud of our alumni, these receptions are more than just an opportunity to celebrate our alumni. The receptions allow our current students to connect with alumni, establishing important mentorship relationships and inspiring our current students to achieve success.

CENTER FOR PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

In addition to participation in minority placement programs sponsored by external groups (i.e., 1L Minority Clerkship Program, Minority Job Fair), the law school devotes ongoing attention to the special interests and concerns of our minority students when it comes to securing legal employment, both during law school and thereafter.

Our Center for Professional Development (formerly Career Services) staff regularly engages in job development and networking activities for students of color by contacting alumni, members of key University leadership groups, and other friends for position vacancies, informational interviews, and professional development advising. Beyond providing the individualized services available to all students, we recruit minority lawyers to serve as mentors for students of color, and we sponsor several career services workshops each year designed primarily for minority students. In addition we provide financial and human resource assistance to our minority student groups who wish to bring panels of minority lawyers and judges to the School of Law. To enhance services to students the Center is staffed by four attorneys. Stacy Lara-Kerr, Associate Director of the Center for Professional Development and a Latina, focuses on advising and program development for our students of color.

In order to achieve these results we evaluate each application holistically, taking into consideration not only the student’s numerical credentials but also the applicant’s personal background and record of accomplishments such as professional achievements, community service, or evidence of talents or backgrounds that will contribute significantly to the law school community. Special consideration is given to applicants from historically disadvantaged groups who have been underrepresented in the field of law. After admitting these outstanding applicants we work hard to enroll these students. The below chart provides information on admissions patterns for the last three years:

A word about the above statistics. The above statistics are taken from the annual ABA report. In 2010 the ABA created different categories for minority students. All students who identify as “Hispanic” or “Latino” are counted as Hispanic even if they are biracial. If a student checks more than one box, they are now counted. Previously there was no multicultural category so we selected an ethnicity for any of our students who checked more than one box. In addition, we report foreign nationals as a separate category. Some of our foreign nationals are also minority students. These students are not included in the above statistics but are included in our overall minority enrollment reports. Students who identify as White-Middle Eastern are also not included in the ABA minority enrollment statistics but are included in the Law School’s minority statistics.
When compared to our overall accept to enroll ratio, this year the rate of accept to enroll was only slightly less for students of color and the overall applicant pool.

ADMINISTRATION

Last July, the Law School welcomed MARK NILES, an outstanding legal scholar and experienced academic leader, as Dean of the Law School. Dean Niles, an African American, is a graduate of Wesleyan University and Stanford Law School. He served as a clerk for the Honorable Francis Murnaghan, Jr., of the U.S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals, as an associate at the D.C. firm of Hogan and Hartson, and as a staff attorney in the civil appellate division of the US. Department of Justice. Before joining the Law School, Dean Niles served as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and professor at American University, Washington College of Law. He teaches and specializes in civil procedure, administrative law, constitutional law, governmental liability, and law and literature. In announcing his appointment, Seattle University President Stephen Sundborg, S.J., said, “he shares a commitment to academic excellence, social justice and diversity that are the hallmarks of the education provided by Seattle University.”

During this academic year, other faculty of color continued in their administrative roles at the law school. Professor LILY KAHNG, an Asian American, served as Associate Dean for Faculty Development. Professor MAGGIE CHON, an Asian American, continued in her role as Associate Dean for Research & Centers. Professor TAYYAB MAHMUD who is South Asian American, was the Director of the Center for Global Justice. Professor ROBERT CHANG and Professor LORRAINE BANNAI, both Asian Americans, serve as the Director and the Associate Director, respectively, of the Fred T. Korematsu Center for Law & Equality.

For the 2011-12 academic year Dean Niles has announced a reorganization in his administrative structure, combining the duties of the existing Associate Dean for Research and the Associate Deans for Faculty Development into one position. Professor NATASHA MARTIN, an African American and Professor ROBERT CHANG will serve as the Associate Deans for Research and Development.

Several key senior staff members are persons of color as well, including the Associate Dean for Student Affairs (DONNA DEMING, African American) the Assistant Dean for Admissions (CAROL COCHRAN, African American), the Director of Alumni Affairs (GRACE GREENWICH, African American), the Director of the Access to Justice Institute (DIANA SINGLETON, Asian American), the Associate Director of the Access to Justice Institute (MONIKA BATRA, South Asian American), the Assistant Director of the Academic Resource Center (BRENDON TAGA, Asian American), the Associate Director of the Center for Professional Development (STACY LARA-KERR, Latina), and the Assistant Director for Student Life (FE LOPEZ, Latina).

FACULTY

During the fall 2008 semester, the Faculty of the School of Law adopted a Strategic Plan for 2008-2012. With regard to Faculty, the Strategic Plan includes the following objective: “We seek to build an internationally prominent faculty that is engaged, collegial, intellectually ambitious, mission centered, spirited and collectively diverse.” In adopting the Plan, the Faculty reaffirmed its commitment to a broadly diverse faculty.

We have the following to report:

1. During the 2010-11 academic year, of our 41 tenure-track faculty, 14 (34%) are persons of color.

2. Professor STEVEN W. BENDER will join the Law School faculty in the fall. Professor Bender received his undergraduate degree from the University of Oregon where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa. He earned his law degree from the University of Oregon and was elected to Order of the Coif. Professor Bender spent five years practicing real estate law at the Phoenix-based business law firm of Lewis and Roca before joining the faculty at the University of Oregon School of

3. Diane Lourdes Dick joins the Seattle University School of Law faculty from the University of Florida Levin College of Law, where she is completing an LL.M. in Taxation with an emphasis on business taxation and also serving as a Graduate Tax Scholar. From 2005-2010, she was an Associate at the Florida law firm of Bilzin Sumberg, where she concentrated her practice in mergers and acquisitions, commercial finance, capital market transactions, debt restructuring and loan workouts. Professor Dick focuses her scholarship on the intersections of financial and corporate law and social policy, incorporating social science theoretical perspectives as well as a rigorous analytical framework acquired from advanced study of federal income tax laws pertaining to the corporate and transactional environment. Her most recent article, which is forthcoming in the Utah Law Review, examines judicial decision-making paradigms in cases arising under complex corporate financing agreements. A magna cum laude graduate of the University of Florida Levin College of Law, she was the articles editor of the Florida Law Review and won numerous awards during her law school tenure for scholastics, writing and service. Professor Dick is biracial – Hispanic and Caucasian.

INSTITUTES AND CENTERS

ACCESS TO JUSTICE INSTITUTE

The Access to Justice Institute (ATJI) mission grows out of our core mission to prepare our students for a lifetime of service to justice. The Institute seeks to fulfill this mission by nurturing a commitment on the part of all members of the law school community to the service of justice for all. We believe that direct involvement by students in fulfilling the unmet need of poor and vulnerable communities through law related services can nurture and focus their idealism into a lifetime commitment of service to justice. The mission of the Institute is to inspire all law students towards a lifelong commitment to equal justice. In serving as a focal point of social justice, the Institute connects students to public interest opportunities that fulfill unmet legal needs, facilitates advocacy and legal skills training, hosts social justice forums and events, counsels students in public interest career exploration, and collaborates with local, state and national efforts to promote equal justice.

The Institute takes the lead in developing law student volunteer opportunities with nonprofit, government, and private law firm partners, locally and abroad. In developing these opportunities, the Institute acts as the bridge by helping providers identify ways to best utilize law student volunteers while supporting law students to ensure their experience is valuable.
The Institute is directed by Diana Singleton (Asian American), a former civil legal aid attorney and staffed by a powerful team of lawyers with extensive public interest backgrounds including Monika Batra (South Asian American).

CENTER FOR INDIAN LAW & POLICY

The establishment of the Center for Indian Law & Policy makes Indian Law a focal point among the array of educational opportunities available to our students while furthering our social justice mission. The Center is built upon the success of the Institute for Indian Estate Planning & Probate, which opened its doors at the Law School in 2005 and which has provided services, information and education to Indian people, tribal leaders, students and attorneys. The mission of the center is to provide an emphasis on Indian law in the curriculum, programs and projects at the Law school; to provide unique learning opportunities to students through innovative classes, practical experience and interaction with tribal representatives; to develop new programs that will assist Indian tribes and their members deal with the variety of unique laws that apply to them; to develop innovative CLE programs and an electronic clearing house for recent developments in Indian law for practitioners; to make information about currently legal issues available to Indian tribes and people; and to provide legal services to Indian tribes and people. The director of the Center is Douglas Nash. Prior to joining the Law School, Mr. Nash worked as a staff attorney at the Native American Rights Fund, served as Chief Counsel to the Nez Perce Tribe, where he is enrolled as a member, and was of-counsel to the Holland & Hart LLP law firm where he headed their Indian Law Practice Group. In addition to directing the Center, Mr. Nash teaches a seminar in Indian Law and Natural Resources.

FRED T. KOREMATSU CENTER FOR LAW & EQUALITY

In November 2008 the School of Law announced the establishment of the Fred T. Korematsu Center for Law and Equality, named in honor of Fred T. Korematsu, who championed the cause of civil liberties, speaking out in the hope that what happened to Japanese Americans would never happen again to any other group. The Korematsu Center draws on the law school’s accomplished faculty in the area of law and equality and will draw together scholars and activists from around the nation and world. It is a place where people come together to develop better understandings of the relationship between law and categories of race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, class, disability, and religion. It is committed to the belief that ideas can change the world, as well as to the understanding that people are the engines for change. It is through coordinated projects focused on research, advocacy, and education that the Center will achieve its charge of advancing justice through knowledge and advocacy. The Center is directed by Professor Robert Chang, and Professor Lorraine Bannai serves as Associate Director.

CENTER FOR GLOBAL JUSTICE

The Center for Global Justice fosters multidisciplinary research, education, and advocacy about critical international legal issues, including human rights, dispute resolution, governance, development, security, and the environment. Through colloquiums, conferences, and publications, the Center actively engages with doctrinal and policy dimensions of key questions that confront international legal regimes. The Center works closely with the School of Law’s international and comparative law programs, and aims to equip students with the knowledge and experience necessary to be leaders for justice in international legal affairs. Professor Tayyab Mahmud is the Director of the Center for Global Justice.

POST GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS

Seattle University School of Law is the only law school in Washington to offer a post-graduate fellowship program. Since 2009, the law school has funded the one-year Leadership for Justice Fellowship for a graduate to work with an organization on a specific social justice project involving underserved or marginalized individuals or communities.

Fellowships awarded by the Law School will allow two 2011 graduates to tackle difficult social justice problems. Anupa Iyer (South Asian American) was awarded the Leadership for Justice Fellowship to report on human rights issues faced by women with mental disabilities in Africa. Andra Kranzler (African American) received the two-year Justice in Action Fellowship to help people of color find living wage jobs in South King County.
Iyer will work with the Mental Disability Advocacy Center, an international NGO based in Budapest, Hungary, to create a report to be used to conduct advocacy before the United Nations and regional bodies. Iyer was an intern for the same organization in summer 2010. This spring she is an intern for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Washington, D.C., on regulations relating to the Americans with Disabilities Amendments Act. She has also interned with Disability Rights Washington and the law school’s International Human Rights Clinic.

Kranzler’s project, The Jobs and Race Equity Project, will be based at Columbia Legal Services to provide legal support to communities of color in the construction industry in South King County. She was an extern and intern with the organization on similar issues. She received the American Bar Association’s 2010 John J. Curtin Scholarship on Homelessness and Poverty to work at West Tennessee Legal Services and has also worked with the Solid Ground Family Assistance Program. This spring she is a Rule 9 intern in the law school’s Predatory Lending Clinic.
